

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

In my opinion the project was a good occasion to reflect on the honor of the war and necessity of peace. During recent month I, my class with my teacher at school we had undertaken a project called "The Unknown Soldier".

To find about information about this topic we read a number of texts. These texts were of a different type for example we started with the analysis of letters write by normal people until argumentative and informative texts.

In these type of texts, in my opinion don't express emotionally all that has happened but from my reflection I can draw my conclusion.

After reading these texts I have reflected on the meaning of war and peace during first world war. There was a clear distinction between those who were suffering and needed peace to survive and those who incited the war and tried to promote for the honor the homeland.

Those who promoted peace were the common people seeing their soon, husband or they themselves go to war without knowing their future and most of the vessels the and was brutal and indelibly color heart participating in the mourning.

Another vision was to state that promoted the war thinking just a personal purpose without looking at the population that was nothing short of desperate and don't agree with the thought of the state.

The project has made me reflect on what has happened previously, the division of the people with his thoughts and ideals of state. One of very important thing is that concentrating the recognition of errors and the knowledge that they are not always right and try not to repeat them in time.
