

A year has passed since the separation of Can and Sanem. Sanem wrote the book, translated into many languages, and Sanem has gained great success. Despite realizing her dreams, a life without Can has ruined Sanem. Sanem, who regretted after Can's departure a year ago, called him immediately, but couldn't reach Can.

For months, no one has reached Can, including Sanem. Sanem feels abandoned, forgotten. She will never forgive Yigit's crippled, hard day in which her notebook was burned, leaving her alone without a day's waiting.

However, Can hasn't had a single day in the last year when he hasn't thought of her. He took refuge in the sea without the need to land, but he could not find peace even if he travelled the whole world. He saw himself as a man: he was aggressive, evil, hurting his love. And, at the same time he will never forgive Sanem for not trusting him.

Aziz Bey, returning from abroad, with the help of his close friend Remide, finds Can and wants to meet him.

Who would ever think Can would step into the city? He returns to Istanbul to see his father on Mrs. Remide's insistence.

No matter how much Sanem and Can escape from each other, the fate has already established a chain of events that will bring them close. With the help of Aziz, Remide and his friends, the merger gains a certain speed.

The love and passion-filled tale of the Phoenix, reborn from the ashes of the Emerald, returned to the sake of her and his life that will begin here.
