- ☐ The late 800 and early '900 have been marked by a deep desire to challenge and break with the past, manifested by the Modernists.
- ☐ Art lives between tradition and innovation. In particular, the purpose of modernism is that of destruction and revolution, and its language points to the disorder, to set against the order of the existing values.

Postmodernism

- Postmodernism (which took off with the end of colonialism and the triumph of civilization and electronic media) marked the end of modernity, that is, of a historical phase characterized by dynamism, progress, from the incessant transformation.

- ☐ Postmodernism (which took off with the end of colonialism and the triumph of civilization and electronic media) marked the end of modernity, that is, of a historical phase characterized by dynamism, progress, from the incessant transformation.
- ☐ Postmodernism arises, therefore, antithetical to modernism because while modernism aims to anticipate future developments, postmodernism denies that history has a line of development identified.

The Reluctant Fundamentalist

The textual study of The Reluctant Fundamentalist shows how post-modern literature of colonized communities is absorbed with political problems.

“Time only moves in one direction. Remember that. Things always change.”

–Mohsin Hamid, The Reluctant Fundamentalist
