

- “De Druidibus”: considering the title the reader could think about something of the the Druids. The title is written in Latin, while English title is “Of the Druids” and the text tells about the same argument.
- “Beowulf and Grendel: the fight”: reading the title the reader could think about a fight between Beowulf and Grendel. This battle may be with arms or also with words.
- “Take off the Ring”: considering the title an intelligent reader could think about “The Lord of the Rings”. In this extract the reader if he haven’t read the text before, he could think a battle between good and evil to take the Ring.
- “Bonny Barbara Allen”: reading the title the reader could think about a woman. The title didn’t detail other things about the characterization, so we may suppose only that she’s a girl.
- “The Wife of Bafa”: the only piece of information the reader can have from the title is that she comes from Bafa. We also know that she’s a girl.
